Welcome to the 2019 Australian Heritage Festival

We extend an invitation to all Victorians and visitors alike to join us in celebrating the best of our shared heritage during this year's Australian Heritage Festival.

The National Trust of Australia (Victoria) is the most significant grassroots, cultural heritage organisation in the state of Victoria. Each year we coordinate a diverse program of events for the Australian Heritage Festival. Events are held across the state, organised by a wide variety of community groups, local councils, individuals, heritage agencies, and other kindred organisations. The Festival beings annually on 18 April, the International Day for Monuments and Sites, and in 2019 will draw to a close on 19 May.

“Our presentation of the Australian Heritage Festival aligns with the National Trust’s mission to inspire the community to appreciate, conserve and celebrate its diverse natural, cultural, social, and Indigenous heritage. ”

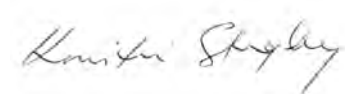

Kristin Stegley

Last year we chose to organise our festival program thematically, and in doing so, captured a richer and more comprehensive insight into our shared heritage. This year we have even more events that relay the stories and experiences of our diverse community

The 2019 Australian Heritage Festival theme is Connecting People, Places, and the Past. It brings to life many chapters of Australian culture and history, relaying the diverse and distinctive experiences that individually define our communities. While our organisation works hard to advocate and fight for our shared heritage on a daily basis, the Festival is an opportunity to reflect on the places where we live, work, and travel, and to celebrate exactly what it is we are seeking to protect. We call on communities to treasure their local cultural heritage by telling their stories and celebrating their traditions, including storytelling, music, food, dance, traditional games, and crafts. This year in particular we encourage communities to consider emerging technologies and digital storytelling to engage with places of cultural significance.

We are grateful for the generous support of our sponsors who have made this Festival possible. In particular we thank our Friend of the Festival supporters who have contributed so many events.

I encourage you to join us in sharing our diverse heritage in the Festival and beyond, to ensure it is protected and respected, contributing to strong, vibrant and prosperous communities.

Kristin Stegley OAM
Chairman, National Trust of Australia (Victoria)

We recognise the role of custodians, advocates, and community members in preserving and celebrating Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultural heritage, shaping the legacy we leave for future generations.

The events presented throughout this theme will engage communities to promote, recognise, and celebrate Aboriginal cultural heritage. Events are presented from a range of organisations and peak bodies, including Victorian Registered Aboriginal Parties, Traditional Owners and Native Title holders.

Cultural Expressions

Many of us celebrate our heritage in the languages we speak, the food we eat, the music we make and stories we tell. Our communities have a rich and diverse tapestry of cultures that have made their indelible mark throughout Victoria. It is the stories, cultures, and ongoing traditions of our shared heritage that have given our suburbs, towns, and communities their distinctive characteristics. These events, through musical performances, storytelling, artistic endeavours, markets, dance, and the love of food, will immerse everyone in the history and heritage of our communities.

Gardens, Landscapes, and the Environment

Victoria contains some of the most beautiful and highly valued natural and cultural landscapes in Australia, many of which are recognised for their design and connections to our history and heritage. This theme gives naturalists and the curious alike the opportunity to explore and engage with the natural environment that surrounds our everyday life, while discovering the visible features which highlight important aspects of our history. Experience significant landscapes and scenic features throughout Victoria, including the importance and diversity of our flora and fauna along our coastlines and rural landscapes, appreciate the beauty of significant gardens, and the history of memorial Avenues of Honour.

Industrial and Maritime Heritage

It is easy to overlook the importance Victoria's maritime and industrial history has played on shaping our contemporary lives. Our industrial heritage traces the history of development, technology, and labour through the factories, mines, mills, and machinery that shape our physical landscape. Maritime heritage explores the significance of shipping and seafaring as an integral aspect of Victoria's commerce history—evident in the remnants of shipwrecks along our rugged coastline and in the maritime infrastructure of wharves, docks, and lighthouses that sits upon it.

Local and Residential Heritage

Local and residential heritage tells the stories of communities through architecture, history, industry, and artwork. Our neighbourhoods are imprinted with generations of Aboriginal heritage and living tradition, and the fabric of these neighbourhoods has been shaped by layers of economic hardship and mobility, waves of migration, labour and industrial history, and urban development. Local historians play a significant role in keeping residential heritage alive and active, as they trace their stories through the trees, landscapes, houses, factories, and artworks, while maintaining its oral histories, exhibitions and house museums. In this theme, local experts expose the stories embedded in the transformation and shifts of our urban and regional landscapes.

Portland Book Launch

Presented by Portland Workskills, the publication Sealing and Whaling at Portland Bay 1828 to 1868 will be launched in Portland some 150 years after the end of the whaling industry. Written by historian Bernard Wallace, this book considers two key industries from Portland's pioneering year—industries central to the establishment and survival of the Portland Bay settlement.

Modernism

During the 1950s, 60s, and 70s Victoria underwent a period of transformation and change on a scale not seen since the gold rush. The post-war boom saw Melbourne's population almost doubled, with the 1956 Olympics a key moment in the modernisation of the city. Despite the historical importance of this period, progress towards recognising and celebrating our post-war heritage has been difficult. Events included within this theme celebrate the optimism and inventiveness of the art, architecture, and design produced during this highly influential period, highlighting the masterful minds and organisations that sort to reshape and redefine the city around us.

Oral and Social History

Social history provides a window into the past of ordinary people and oral history tells these stories through songs, storytelling, folklore, and memory. The secrets of our history tend to lurk in forgotten archives and dwell within the intergenerational narratives that make-up our diverse heritage. The voices of the Victoria's past continue to unravel the historical threads that binds places, families, and communities to the physical fabric of our heritage. Through stories, artefacts, recordings, places, and archives, these events will provide a window into the hearts and minds of ordinary people who shaped the historical landscape of Victoria.

War Heritage

War heritage explores and commemorates the legacy of Australia's involvement in conflict and the contributions of those who served and died in all wars, conflicts, and peacekeeping operations. These events trace the personal stories of hardship and mateship embedded in the birth of the ANZAC legend in Gallipoli in World War I to the evolution of Australia's living heritage and commemoration of its ongoing involvement in war and peacekeeping. War heritage tells the stories of those who served in the Australian armed forces, the experience of communities and families in war-time, the history of the anti-war movement and draft resistance, and the commemoration of war in our national identity. Through personal stories and artefacts, local histories, and national exhibitions, events examine the nuanced and complex tapestry of loss, pride, sacrifice, and memory that comprises the Victorian legacy of war and conflict.

Women's History

These events position the experiences and voices of women at the forefront of Victorian history and across landmark historical events. Through archival research and oral history, these events will unearth the forgotten voices and overlooked contributions of women throughout Victorian history and trace the struggles and achievements of women's liberation. Come and trace the experience of Aboriginal women over thousands of years, uncover the narratives of hardship and burdens carried by women in wartime, and experience the domestic household as a crucial window to understand the history of communities and places. These events will explore the theme by situating women as the historical focal point in the stories of our local communities, our significant events, and their contributions and achievements in both the private and public spheres.

Where Are All the Women?

Geoffrey Kaye Museum of Anaesthetic History

In December 2015, the Geoffrey Kaye Museum of Anaesthetic History at the Australian and New Zealand College of Anaesthetists, began exploring the seemingly invisible histories of early women anaesthetists in Australia and New Zealand. These stories are inextricably bound to the struggles women experienced in gaining access to medical education and hospital appointments. Frequently, their work in anaesthesia was short lived with many of these women taking on leading positions in women's and children's health. While their career paths veered away from anaesthesia, this does not diminish their work within the field, nor should it render them invisible within its history. Join the museum's curator to look at the professional lives of some of these women, followed by a guided tour of the museum.
